Congress Should Investigate Conference Realignment Decisions (September 27) — Tradition and rivalries are following by the wayside as college presidents are seeking other conference options. As tax-exempt organizations, at what point will Congress step in and begin to say that traveling from Texas to Connecticut to New York is not only in the best interest of the student athlete who should be in class, but also not an expense that tax payers should have to pay. If the country is in an economic crisis, should expansion not be tied more to geography than to BCS affiliation and television rights? Read More
